

DANIEL COIT GILMAN SUMMER HOUSE

Off Huntington Road, Northeast Harbor

Daniel Coit Gilman summered here for more than 20 years, from the late 1880s until his death in 1908. Gilman was the first president of Johns Hopkins University, holding the post from 1875 to 1902. During that period he emphasized postgraduate study, and his success in the endeavor stimulated the rapid growth of postgraduate programs in other universities. The three-story shingled house is privately owned.
